MIAMI, Fla. – Ron English, a former NFL linebacker and the dean of the nationally renowned South Florida Prep School, died Thursday night after suffering a heart attack earlier this week, school officials said. He was 58. English had joined South Florida Prep as an assistant coach last summer. He had been the head coach at Fort Lauderdale St. Thomas Aquinas and at Episcopal School of Florida in Jacksonville before taking the position at Prep. English is one of just a handful of coaches that Prep has employed during its 42-year history. The Bears went 85-17 under English during the 1990s and won a state title in 1997. English left Prep shortly before he was scheduled to testify in a child abuse case and was also a witness in the murder trial of his friend, Willie McNeil, one of the participants in the "Miami Vice" TV series. McNeil was accused in the death of Wendy Cuevas, a Gainesville girl, but was acquitted in the 1999 trial. The others players in the series were real-life drug dealer Vince "the Chin" Gigante and his alleged associate, Gus "Bigfoot" Merola, both of New York. "It's very devastating," Prep Athletic Director Mike Janes said of English's passing. "He was a great person, a great leader and a great example to our student athletes. "He was a big part of Prep, and he did a lot for Prep. He was a great man, and we're going to miss him dearly." English is buried at Neptune Memorial Park, and school officials remembered him Thursday
